Noise won't be the only thing struck with awe

Hear the difference. See the transformation.

We are AKUSTUS. We design and fabricate acoustic solutions for interior spaces ranging from the commercial and institutional to the residential. We're in the business of making spaces look and sound better, whether it's for the sake of comfort, concentration, clarity or collaboration.

Our fully recyclable polyester fibre products are made from 50% recycled content originating from plastic water bottles. Laminated without the application of any chemical agents, the material is non-toxic and free of off-gassing chemicals.

Microscopic air pockets in the material absorb sound energy, reducing reverberation, removing excess noise and improving speech intelligibility.

Our design and production team has collaborated with many architects, interior designers and contractors to provide solutions for their projects. As we continue to expand our global presence, we look forward to meeting, working with and providing solutions for more and more people around the world.

Shukaku in Chartreuse

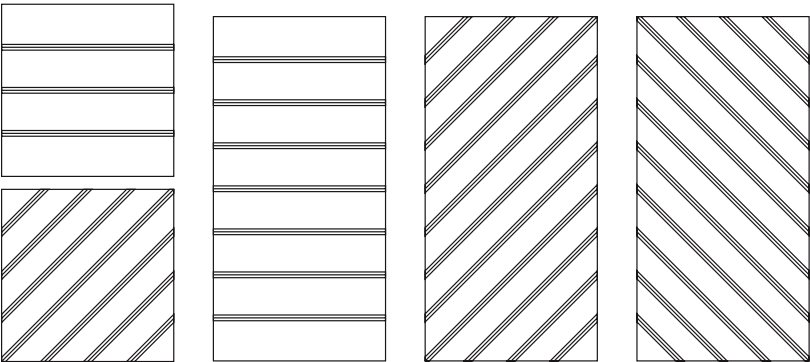

Shukaku in Graphite

Shukaku is the Japanese word for “harvest” and the traditional practices of harvest are what inspired Nanako Sube when she designed Shukaku Cloud. In rural Japan, rice stalks are gathered into bundles and then hung on racks to dry before being threshed to separate the grain from the stalks. Sube took the shape of these bundles, mirrored and repeated them to create the grid-like structure of the cloud. Suspend Shukaku in a hotel foyer or station concourse to bring a piece of pastoral calm to the space.
